

About the Speaker:

Louise C. Miller, R.T. R(M)

Louise Miller is the Co-director of the Mammography Practicum at the School of Medicine, University of California in San Diego. From 1990 - 2008 she served as coordinator and faculty of the QCC Mammography Seminars which trained over 17,000 technologists in the US and Canada. She has also served on numerous national committees, including the American College of Radiology and the American Society of Radiologic Technologists which have developed education and training standards for mammography in the US. Ms. Miller has volunteered her time to help develop, coordinate and implement mammography screening programs and education for Mammography technologists in numerous foreign countries including Cuba, the Ukraine, China, Mexico, Costa Rica, Jordan, Israel and Ghana. She has been a consultant and invited lecturer for noted institutions and radiologists including, Harvard Medical School, the Mayo Clinic, UCLA and Stanford University as well Drs. Laszlo Tabar, Edward Sickles, Daniel Kopans and Michael Linver. When at home in San Diego she works full time as a mammographer and supervisor at UCSD Medical Center and continues to provide on-site consulting and educational services for Mammography facilities throughout the US and Canada.
